SUMMARY STATEMENT: The 911 emergency system is designed to provide timely and efficient response in times of emergency. Unfortunately there are people who choose to abuse this system for non-emergent calls. In doing so, they are diverting valuable resources away from potentially life-threatening situations. The risk to responders increases and the frequent non-emergent calls take away these finite resources from the rest of the community. As an example, a single individual called 911 for non-emergent calls 145 times over a three-year period. Within the first two weeks of 2022, this individual had already placed eight non-emergent calls to 911. Each one of those times, EMS responded.

The purpose of this ordinance is to discourage the abuse of the 911 system. It is not intended to discourage normal calls to 911 but to address the situations where individuals are repeatedly using the 911 system as a phone directory, a ride service, and other such abuses. A 911 abuser would first be warned that their continued abuse of the system could result in an infraction. If the abuse continues, they would then be cited with an infraction and fined $250 in order to discourage future abuse of the system.

There is presently no state statute under which a violator could be criminally cited or charged. The City of Fairbanks adopted a similar ordinance in 2012 with a $250 fine. The City of Wasilla as well as the City of Palmer currently have ordinances regarding excessive police response to address specifically abuse of the system related to police calls within the city limits. The fine in Wasilla is $500. The fine in Palmer is graduated from $75 for the first offense to $300 by the third offense.

RECOMMENDATION OF ADMINISTRATION: Adoption of Ordinance.
